A HEDNESFORD school has been given a cash boost by cereals firm Kellogg's.

Staffordshire University Academy has been given an undisclosed amount of the money by the firm which it will put towards improving its Breakfast Club facilities.

The Marston Road school says the money will allow it to invest in new equipment and offer a wider range of food, drink and social activities for its pre-school club.

The club, which started three years ago, offers students a free breakfast before school starts. Around 40 students each day take the school up on its offer.

Teaching assistant George Massey said: "We believe that starting the day with a healthy, nutritious breakfast in a friendly and inclusive environment sets every student up for a positive and productive day of learning. Breakfast Club offers the students a secure place to start each school day, with a warm welcome."
